WHAT HAS HE MADE.—The Albany Post thus replies to a statement made in the New York Herald that during the last twenty years William B. Astor has so managed a fortune of twenty millions as to roll it into sixty millions:—

"Suppose he has, what then? What has he made by the operation, except to increase worry to keep the run of his increased wealth? Astor, with sixty millions, eats no more oysters, quail, woodcock, and boned turkey than he did when he was worth ten millions. He dresses no better and has a thousand times less fun. We beat him on the sleep and have no lawsuits with tenants and trespassers. Robbers lay for Astor every time he goes out doors at dark. They don't think of Astor, with sixty millions of dollars, as having sixty millions of troubles. To keep the run of his rents, bonds and real estates, keeps Astor in work fourteen hours a day, and yet Astor gets three square meals a day, which is just what we obtain without any millions, any tenants, any real estate, and only work eight hours per day.

"If men's happiness increased with their money, everybody should be justified in worshipping the Golden Calf. The happiness increases with their earnings up to a certain point—the point necessary to secure the comforts of life, say $2,000 a year. All beyond this is superfluous. Being superfluous, it is productive of no good whatever. The richer the man, the greater is the probability that his sons will live on billiards and die in the debtors' asylum. With contentment and $2,000 a year, a man may be as happy as a prince, without contentment you will be miserable; even if your wealth equal the rent rolls of Croesus."

TWO OF THE VETERANS.—The old age of those two Veterans of English literature, Disraeli and Carlyle, presents respectively a rather noted contrast—one of them bringing out a novel of very high life, in his well known old style, while the other sits among "the silences," like Marius among the ruins of Caesars, and gives up the world as a bad concern, and a little better than the thing Coleridge called it, "the devil in a straight waistcoat." Then the facial portraits of the two men are so different—as we see them in the magazines of the day—that Disraeli looking out from among the "crow's feet," with a confident air of work, and Carlyle's in its vacant gaze of weary disgust, telling the experience of a life-time spent in combating the "shams" and fallacies of general opinion. The biography of his life seems to be given in the "careless desolation" of Carlyle's look. The cable telegram, announcing the illness of the author of Lothair, has awakened here sympathy as genuine as in England. No greater tribute could be paid to the cosmopolitan nature of the fame of Disraeli.

A BEAUTIFUL SENTIMENT.—In Augustus Daly's play, "Under the Gaslight," Laura Courtland utters these beautiful sentiments:—
"Let the woman you look upon be wise or vain, beautiful or homely, rich or poor, she has but one thing she can really give or refuse—her heart. Her beauty, her wit, her accomplishments, she may sell to you—but her love is the treasure without money and without price. She only asks in return that when you look upon her eyes shall speak a mute devotion, that when you address her, your voice shall be gentle, loving and kind. That you shall not despise her because she cannot understand all at once your vigorous thoughts and ambitious plans, for when misfortune and evil have defeated your greatest purposes, her love should remain to console you. You look upon the remains of strength and grandeur; do not despise the flowers because their fragrance is all they have to give. Remember, love is all that a woman can give—but it is the only earthly thing which God permits us to carry beyond the grave."

HOW TO FORCE RADISHES.—Radishes may be grown in a few days by the following somewhat singular method: Let some good radish seed soak in water for fifty-four hours, then put them in a bag exposed to the sun. In the course of the day germination will commence. The seed must then be sown in a well-manured hot bed, and watered from time to time with lukewarm water. By this treatment the radishes will, in a very short time, acquire a sufficient bulk, and be good to eat. If it be required to get good radishes in winter, during the severe cold, an old cask should be sawn in two, and one-half of it filled with good earth. The radish seed, beginning to shoot as before, must then be sown in, the other half of the barrel put on the top of the full one, and the whole apparatus carried down into the cellar. For watering, lukewarm water should be used as before. In the course of five or six days the radishes will be fit to eat.

DRIED FRUITS.—The return of the season for gathering fruits and preparing them for market makes it our duty to offer some suggestions to fruit raisers. To bring the best prices, the apples ought to be sliced thin, taking out the cores, and then dried in a warm place, but avoid the use of a great saving of labor; but avoid that machine which cuts the apples into rings. They are scarcely saleable in that shape. They should be dried a bright straw color, taking care to keep them from wet. Peaches should be peeled and cut lengthwise of the peach, and great care ought to be taken to dry them bright. The smallest quantity of stones mixed with the fruit will ruin the whole. Blackberries must be dried thoroughly without breaking them. Cherries, when pitted, sell better with red and black mixed. They must be thoroughly dried, and no sugar, molasses, or syrup mixed with them.

MINERAL WATERS.
Received this day Kissengen, Vichy and Seltzer Waters, in half pint bottles, at 15c each; $1.50 per dozen. Also, fresh Congress Water, in pint bottles, at 25c each; $2.50 per dozen. my 31 JANNEY & CO
